

ABSTRACT

- Methods are provided for monitoring a large number of genes using cipher probes. In preferred embodiments, the cipher probes are immobilized on a substrate to form a universal array that is suitable for monitoring the expression of almost any genes.
- 5 Mediator probes are used in some embodiments to hybridize with the cipher probes and nucleic acids derived from transcripts of genes.